15	1	Saucer.	transfer printed in underglaze blue with 'Broseley Willow' pattern. Gold edge.	No marks.	Porcelain,		Broseley Willow	Probably John Rose of Coalport	Coalport, Shropshire	c.1810	Following his apprenticeship with Thomas Turner at Caughley in Shropshire, John Rose (with the financial support of Edward Blakeway) commenced to manufacture ceramics on his own account at the Calcut China Manufactory at Jackfield c.1793. By 1796 the new town of Coalport, which was nearby, had been started and Rose, Blakeway and Co, moved their factory to this advantageously located site, where the works remained until 1926. Rose manufactured a wide range of utilitarian wares especially tea, dinner and dessert services of a high quality. In 1820 the company was awarded the Society of Arts Gold Medal for a leadless glaze using Feldspar instead, which was considered much healthier for the employees. At both the 1851 and 1862 International Exhibitions, Coalport were awarded medals for their production. For further reading see : Coalport and Coalbrookdale Porcelains by G. A. Godden, published by Herbert Jenkins (1970). Coalport by Michael Messenger, published by Antique Collectors Club (1995).

Bone China,		Broseley Willow	Maker unknown		c.1820-25	The pattern is similar to that recognised as Mason's pattern 50; possibly a replacement.
20 to 20C	4	Pair of essence jars with lids.	decorated in the English style, with random groups of flowers in enamel colours. Necks gilded with insects and flowers.	'MASON'S PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' impressed in two lines (on 20).	Ironstone,			C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1820-25	This form of essence jar was produced with other versions of decoration, including applied and moulded reliefs of flowers and leaves.
21	1	Wine Cooler.	painted in enamel colours with English flowers on one side and fruit on the reverse. Raised moulded vine leaves and grapes around top. Satyr mask handles. The vine and satyrs in gold. Gilded on socle and plinth. Moulded rim with stylised acanthus.	'MASON'S PATENT IRONSTONE' impressed in a straight line.	Ironstone,			C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1815-20	The 1822 Phillips Sale Catalogue includes a 'pair of wine coolers'. One of the most important objects in the collection.
22 & 22A	2	Pair of Campana shape vases.	painted oblong panels on the front, one depicting 'Goatherds', the other with 'An Encampment'. Claret ground, blue underside, olive green plinths. Gilded plinth, handles and ornament. Rim moulded with pecten shells.	'MASON'S PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' impressed in two lines.	Ironstone,			C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1815-20	Most pieces of this quality are attributed to Samuel Bourne, after the list of his works in the sales of 1818 and 1822, (Phillips of London). It is thought that this pair of vases are by Bourne. These items are probably prestige/exhibition objects. See : Godden's Guides : 2nd Edition (1980) page 192 and 3rd Edition (1991) page 217.

'MASON'S PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' impressed in a straight line; inscribed in red : 'Beauchief Abbey, Derbyshire'.	Ironstone,			C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1815-22	A very similar service was sold in Phillips, London, 1822, attributed to the painting of Samuel Bourne : 'A very beautiful, painted landscape dessert service, by S. Bourne' and 'A costly dessert service exquisitely painted in select views by S. Bourne, enriched with burnished gold'. Samuel Bourne (c.1789-1866) was born in Norton-in-the-Moors, Staffordshire. He is reputed to have served his apprenticeship with Wood and Cauldwell, where he learned the art of enamel painting. Unfortunately, no evidence seems to survive about his period of employment with Mason's beyond the references to his finished work in the auction catalogues. It is possible that Bourne was employed in the decoration of ceramics from about 1809. His work for Mason's is unsigned and it is thought that he left the company's employment by 1828. Samuel Bourne is recorded as working as an artist and designer for Minton from 1828 until 1848. It is probable that he maintained his associations with Minton until 1863 when he retired. Samuel Bourne painted, in watercolour, George Miles Mason, his wife

72	1	Jug (miniature), 'Hydra' shape.	octagonal, transfer printed in overglaze black, painted in enamel colours. Moulded handle decorated with part of the transfer printed design. Red line border.	'MASON'S' over a round crown, drape enclosing 'PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' printed in black. 'H' painted in red.	Earthenware,			Geo. L. Ashworth	Broad Street Works, Hanley	c.1870-80
73	1	Jug, small size.	octagonal, outline transfer print in black. Painted in underglaze blue and enamel colours and gold, with the 'Waterlily' pattern.	'PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' impressed in a circle	Ironstone,		Waterlily	C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1815-20	The jug contains a newspaper cutting about Miles Mason, the contents of which are somewhat outdated and inaccurate.
74	1	Jug.	elongated oval shape with mean lip, decorated with a 'Bandana' pattern printed in black, painted in enamel colour, predominantly green. Red enamel rim.	'MASON'S' over an angular crown, drape enclosing 'PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' printed in black.	Earthenware,		Bandana	C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1840-48	The word 'bandana' seems to have its origins in the Hindustani word 'Bandhnu', referring to the method of dyeing in which parts of the cloth are tied to prevent them receiving coloured dye. The word also relates to a type of calico printing in which a pattern is produced by discharging the colour.
75	1	Jug.	globular form, with twig moulded handle, transfer printed outline with the 'Sacrificial Lamb' pattern. Painted in enamel colours.	'MASON'S' over a round crown, drape enclosing 'PATENT IRONSTONE CHINA' printed in black.	Ironstone,		Sacrificial Lamb	C. J. Mason	Lane Delph	c.1830-40
